It impliedly admits the weakness of the National Government to protect its citi-zons in the cardinal rights pertaining to civil government: to wit, the right to citiopy life, liberty, and property. But a retrospective view of the many efforts to secure these rights and the exercise of them, falling invariably, make Senator Windom's scheme the less of two cells.

Investigating Congressional committees, with unjurity and nanority reports, are uncless as a means to correct our wrongs. They are good ownigh compaign documents and will doubtless awaken the truth to a sense of its negligence, if not its injunitee, to the Ropub-Hean citizen of the South, black and white. We are in the position of the horse that is starving, while there is promise to plant grass. Our need is immediate and who knows it best?

speculative theories of our citizenship No speculative theories of our citizonship and its privileges can longer be tolerated, and I am pleased to see the efforts of Professor Greecer, Congressmen Cais, Rainey and Smalls, and Marshal Douglass in the direction of aiding Semator Windom. Title CITY OF WASHINGTON, under the fistering care of Congress, ought to become in a short time the greatest capital in the world. We are proud of our broad streets and packs, filled with scauses of our mighty dead. The members of our multiply dead. The members of our multiply dead. The members of our multiply dead in the most proud. The retired officers of the array and navy—men whose characters have been formed amid the visiestudes of war or the buffitting of the ocean—reside here and, with their families, will always give high tone to the refinement, the intellectual and social life of the city of Washington. Here we have the bravest men and the most beautiful women (applause); and America may well be proud of twashington, and the most beautiful women (applause); and America may well be proud of the glorious country of which it is the Capital. (Loud applause).

I am suffering from a cold in the lungs and am mabble to speak longer in the open air, however much I might wish to do so. I may say that two days and nights travelling in the cars, after engaging in a Senatorial contest, is not the best preparation for speech making, even if the open air was more baimy and the circumstances more fivorable than they are to night. Again let me repeat my thanks for your enthusiastic reception. The renambrance of it will remain with me all my life and will simulate me to increased effort in defending as far as I can the principles of that party out of respect to which you have come forth in such large numbers this cold night.

At the conclusion of Mr. Carpenter's speed he retired from the balcony, and a reception was held in the long drawing-room of the hotel. Hundreds of gentlemen and ladies took advantage of the opportunity to extend a per-sonal greeting to the distinguished guest of the evening. The demonstration was most creditable to Chalrman Redway, Dr. Bliss, and other members of the committee of arrange-ments. The only thing that marred the affair was the fact that the drivers of the street cars persisted in forcing their cars through the dense throng in front of the hotel, thereby en-dangering the lives of many, and the noise made preventing many from hearing the speeches. The police were so few in number that they were unable to prevent this singular
